“ I didnt know Nick that well but I worked with Sacora for a while. From seeing the pictures and or comments, Nick seemed to be a great father, friend and just a great person in general. I am truly saddened by his death at such a young age. I am also saddened by the misery that Sacora, their children and the friends and family are going through right now. The only thing I can tell you is You never forget them, you will always miss them but with time it does get a bit easier. Paying for you all

“ We worked together at the Redmond Walmart TLE until he moved up the ladder. He was always so upbeat and cracking jokes or talking about his family. That is what impressed me about him. Here was this young guy and he was so full of love for those girls. He started talking about Christmas in July and singing Christmas Carols at the top of his lungs, and the countdown would begin. He could always make me laugh. We had very heated but fun talks about baseball since he was a Giants Fan and the only team out there for me is the Yankees. He had a smile that could light up the room. Through him and work I met Sacora. I cant imagine a more well suited young couple. Everything was about family. He will be missed by so many because he touched everyone he met. May you rest in peace, Nick and God give peace to this family of his.

“ Sacora and I had our babies together, and through her I met Nick. Nick was the sweetest dad we knew. The way his face lit up around his girls was inspiring and unforgettable. I know that he gave those girls enough love to last a life time. For that, Im thankful. Let us all get together now and help continue his job for him in loving his beautiful girls: Sacora, Lilly, Makhaila, and Cheyanna.
